BEER.

Describing himself as a brewer on the 'lunatic fringe', Ashley Huntington gives us ales with a completely unique sense of place. His farm and brewery on the Derwent river (40 minutes from Hobart) provide the majority of his malt and hops. Barrel aging, spontaneous fermentations with fruit in ale, sour cherries and constant experimentation; it seems the only boundaries Ash runs into are from nature itself and perhaps our preconceptions on what ales are or can be. Each ale batch is different, showing us that by removing mass produced ingredients and allowing the season to influence the end result he can produce something both exciting and rewarding. Check out his Instagram for an insight into his passion and drive for creating true Farmhouse ales. (twometretall)
